Accountability Theory Meets Accountability Practice By Dr Harald Bergsteiner

Recent failures in the corporate sector are to a large extent a failure of accountability. Unfortunately, accountability tends to be characterised by atomistic research; confusing language; models of limited scope; poor conceptualisation of key constructs; context insensitivity; and a lack of methodological integration. This book not only integrates but substantially adds to the extant accountability literature, providing a holistic view of accountability, showcasing a newly-generated Holistic Accountability Model (HAM). This book clarifies the purposes of accountability; identifies what triggers accountability exchanges; generates a set of well-defined responsibility and accountability constructs; and, via a grounded graphic model, links these constructs to the accountability process and to the influences that impact on this process. Several working models are proposed to help practitioners achieve a better understanding of the extent and nature of their accountability obligations, develop and implement more effective accountability policies and practices, and make better accountability decisions.

Editorial Review

Review

This scholarly volume on accountability theory and practice examines the theoretical constructs of accountability relationships and explores, through a broad collection of data, the practical applications of accountability knowledge across a wide spectrum of management contexts. The volume covers topics such as integrative responsibility and accountability models, the Holistic Accountability Model, critical roles of organizational context, web-of-accountability relationships in organizations, and decision tree models. The book also includes a collection of appendices on research methodology and model details. Bergsteiner is a professor at Australian Catholic University.
